

EJ726560 - Proyecto Kuatiahe'e: Saving a Language for ChildrenHelp With This PageERIC Home0 items in My Clipboard | Add record to My ClipboardRecord Details*Full-Text Availability Options:Help Finding Full Text | Find in a LibraryRelated Items: Show Related ItemsClick on any of the links below to perform a new search*ERIC #: EJ726560Title: Proyecto Kuatiahe'e: Saving a Language for ChildrenAuthors: Aquino, Almidio; Kirylo, JamesDescriptors: Foreign Countries; Religious Conflict; American Indian Languages; Religious Factors; Indigenous Populations; American Indian Culture; Cultural Awareness; Program Descriptions; Language Maintenance; Heritage Education; Cultural MaintenanceSource: Childhood Education, v81 n6 p349 Aug 2005Peer-Reviewed: YesPublisher: Association for Childhood Education International (ACEI) Subscriptions, 17904 Georgia Ave., Suite 215, Olney, MD 20832. Web site: <http://www.acei.org>.Publication Date: 2005-08-15Pages: 6Pub Types: Journal Articles; Reports - DescriptiveAbstract: Nearly 20 years ago, the powerful motion picture The Mission, starring Robert De Niro and Jeremy Irons, was released, bringing worldwide exposure to the Guarani aboriginal people. Based on historical events from the 1700s and set in Paraguay, Brazil, and Argentina, the film was simultaneously moving and inspiring, yet also a disturbing presentation of how the Guarani Indians found themselves at the epicenter of a geo-political, religious conflict between the Crown of Portugal, Spain, and the missionary Jesuits. The picture ultimately ends with a spellbinding scene in which three naked, surviving Guarani children board a small canoe to start a new life elsewhere after their community is completely destroyed by European troops. For several centuries, the Guarani, whose language formed the cultural foundation of Paraguay, have significantly decreased in numbers and there is a real danger of their culture and language being completely lost. Indeed, the Ava Guarani aboriginal group numbers approximately 2,000. In order to raise more awareness of the important cultural contributions made by the Guarani and to help preserve their unique identity and heritage, the authors highlight the vital work that is being accomplished through Facultad de Lenguas Vivas / Institute of Guarani Linguistics in Asuncion, Paraguay. Here, they describe an education project that was launched by the Institute of Guarani Linguistics to maintain and affirm the cultural identity of Ava Guarani children called Proyecto Kuatiahe'e. (Contains 1 note.)Abstractor: ERICReference Count: 13Note: N/AIdentifiers: ParaguayRecord Type: JournalLevel: N/AInstitutions: N/ASponsors: N/AISBN: N/AISSN: ISSN-0009-4056Audiences: N/ALanguages: EnglishEducation Level: Elementary Secondary EducationERIC HomeRelated Items

- "Nehiyawewin Askikh": Cree Language on the Land-- Language Planning through Consultation in the Loon River Cree First Nation
- MOSAICA: A Web-2.0 Based System for the Preservation and Presentation of Cultural Heritage
- Self-Determination through Self-Education: Culturally Responsive Schooling for Indigenous Students in the USA
- Assessing the Language Proficiency of Tribal Heritage Language Learners: Issues and Concerns for American Indian Pueblo Languages
- Native American Languages as Heritage Mother Tongues

More Related ItemsMicrofiche to Megabytes

Help ERIC expand online access to nearly 340,000 documents indexed 1966-1992, now available only on microfiche. Click here to learn about our digitization project.